Password Management

Are managing passwords becoming more and more of a problem? Every day it seems you are asked to set-up another password and every company has a different requirement for how to create the password. Well here are a couple of ideas on how to remove some of the frustration.

For short passwords (four to 10 characters) that you may be required to change frequently, use something that you can just move the number around in. For example start with 2silly, then you could change it to s2illy, s12illy, s1l2ly, s1ll2y, s1lly2, and then when you forget, you can figure it out pretty easily.

If the password needs to be longer than 10 characters, try a passphrase. Passphrases are becoming popular because they are easy to remember and much more secure. Try a phrase like: "passwords are 2 silly", "I am tired of trying to remember silly passwords" or "my favorite group is the BSZ's". The key is to come up with a phrase that you can easily remember.
